FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Three GTC Project Managers Achieve LEED Accreditation

Golden Triangle Construction (GTC) announces three of its Project Managers recently earned the prestigious distinction of LEED® professional accreditation. The LEED accreditation program, which is now managed by the Green Building Certification Institute, involves intensive training on sustainable or “green” building practices and principles, and LEED Accredited Professionals are qualified to steward building projects through the LEED certification process.

Gary Adams, LEED AP, has a BS in Management Technology with an emphasis in Construction from the University of Nebraska and has 15 years project management experience. Gary is one of GTC’s Senior Project Managers and has been with the company for 9 years.

Andy Wood, LEED AP, holds a BS in Construction Management from Colorado State University and has 8 years of project management experience. In addition to being a Senior Project Manager at GTC, Andy has also been the company’s Safety Manager for the past five years.

Todd Schroeder, LEED AP, is also a Senior Project Manager at GTC and holds a BS in Construction Management from the University of Wisconsin-Stout. Todd has 10 years of project management and engineering experience.

GTC is a proud member of the U.S. Green Building Council and now staffs a total of fifteen LEED Accredited Professionals. GTC’s LEED APs guide all types of construction projects through the highest of levels of LEED certification, including a current renovation project on the City of Golden’s Public Works Administration Building that is slated to receive Platinum certification.

Golden Triangle Construction (GTC) has been a commercial general contractor in the Colorado Front Range construction market since 1977. For more information, please call Dennis Richard at (303) 772-4051 or email drichard@gtc1.net.
